A mystery/thriller set in a small rustbelt town in post-recession America, where a one-dollar bill changing hands connects a group of characters involved in a shocking multiple murder. The path of the dollar bill, and point of view in each episode, paints a picture of a modern American town with deep class and cultural divides that spill out into the open as the town’s secrets get revealed. Follows the outrageous lives and loves of those responsible for a global women’s magazine. Their struggles are about finding your identity, managing friendships and getting your heart broken, all while wearing the perfect jeans to flatter any body type. While the show is heavily inspired by Coles’ experiences, the series won’t directly name Cosmopolitan and instead centers around a fictional publication, Scarlet Magazine. Hardin stars as the magazine editor in chief, Jacqueline, while Stevens will star as a writer who has just been promoted to her dream job. Jacqueline is described as quietly tough and confident and someone who can intimidate without saying a word, but she also has a strong nurturing side and encourages the young staffer to find her voice as a writer. Jack Thornton has trouble winning enough at cards for the stake he needs to get to the Alaska gold fields. His luck changes when he pays $250 for Buck, a sled dog that is part wolf to keep him from being shot by an arrogant Englishman also headed for the Yukon. En route to the Yukon with Shorty Houlihan -- who spent time in jail for opening someone else’s letter with a map of where gold is to be found -- Jack rescues a woman whose husband was the addressee of that letter. Buck helps Jack win a $1,000 bet to get the supplies he needs. And when Jack and Claire Blake pet Buck one night, fingers touch. (Release Date: December 25, 2019)

Set in Italy during World War II. It tells the story of Yossarian, a US Air Force bombardier who is furious because thousands of people he has never met are trying to kill him. But his real problem is not the enemy—it is his own army, which keeps increasing the number of missions the men must fly to complete their service. If Yossarian makes any attempt to avoid the perilous missions he's assigned, he'll be in violation of Catch-22, a hilariously sinister bureaucratic rule which specifies that a concern for one's own safety in the face of dangers which are real and immediate is the process of a rational mind; a man is considered insane if he willingly continues to fly dangerous combat missions, but a request to be removed from duty is evidence of sanity and therefore makes him ineligible to be relieved from duty. Clooney will star as Colonel Cathcart. (May - August)

Three years into her graduate studies at a demanding Boston university, the unnamed narrator of this nimbly wry, concise debut finds her onetime love for chemistry is more hypothesis than reality. She's tormented by her failed research - and reminded of her delays by her peers, her advisor, and most of all her Chinese parents, who have always expected nothing short of excellence from her throughout her life. But there's another, non-scientific question looming: the marriage proposal from her devoted boyfriend, a fellow scientist whose path through academia has been relatively free of obstacles and with whom she can't make a life before finding success on her own. Eventually the pressure mounts so high that she must leave everything she thought she knew about her future and herself behind. And for the first time, she's confronted with a question she won't find the answer to in a textbook: What do I really want? Over the next two years, this winningly flawed, disarmingly insightful heroine learns the formulas and equations for a different kind of chemistry - one in which the reactions can't be quantified, measured, and analyzed, one that can be studied only in the mysterious language of the heart. Taking us deep inside her scattered, searching mind, here is a brilliant new literary voice that astutely juxtaposes the elegance of science, the anxieties of finding a place in the world, and the sacrifices made for love and family.

The South Side of a certain Midwestern megalopolis is nicknamed "Chiraq," because geographically it's in Chicago, but the violence level is straight out of Baghdad. The show follows a half dozen interrelated lives, all linked by two things: the same skin color and the same omnipresent threat of deadly violence. Henderson plays Kevin, an adolescent whose childlike innocence collides with his pent up aggression. Kevin has seen more in his twelve years than most people have seen in their whole lives. McClain is 18-year-old Jerrika, a tightly wound restaurant manager. She and her boyfriend, Brandon, are trying to pull themselves up in the world, but the Southside does not easily let them go. Dawson will play the mother of two of the main characters Brandon and Coogie. A hard-drinker, she's a woman that has never received a lot of love from her parents so when she has her own children she has very little to give. Weaver is Ronnie, a street corner philosopher and a fixture in the neighborhood, who must go to extraordinary lengths to try and win back the love of his life.

The American cowboy, the ninja, and the Viking form a triumvirate of toughness seldom equaled in world-to say nothing of pop culture-history. Each is superb in his own right, but what about when the most deadly attributes of each can be found in one man? Duncan is such a man, the result of a secret government program to create soldiers for the war on terror. This experimental regimen conscripts people suffering from multiple personality disorder and turns them into "triplets," highly lethal operatives possessing three distinct personalities drawing from warrior/tough guy archetypes. Duncan serves as the reader's entry point into a complex web of espionage and violence that grows more intriguing as we are let in on exactly what's up with Duncan, the people who want to drag him back into the fold, and the rest of the triplets that remain at large. Trying to pursue "The American Dream", two brothers embark on the journey to what would be the adventure of their lives. Delfino and his brother manage to cross the border of Mexico / USA. When they find themselves in the empty desert of western Texas, dehydrated, tired, they find a white pick-up that stops in front of them. Boss, a man of a certain age, emerges from the vehicle and offers the brothers a paid job and both get into the van excited that they were going to start building their dreams. Boss takes them to eat and they can clean before they take them to the "Ranch", already ready and on the way they arrive at the place, where they observe that it is surrounded by an electric grid, there is security, dogs on guard and everything is closed with big chains and padlocks The doors close behind them, to realize that they have been imprisoned and are now slaves in a forced labor camp, with more prisoners like them. Every day they worked by removing stones from the quarry, among scourges, fights and inhuman treatment that leads the brothers to seek refuge in the memories and hallucinations of the stories that his grandfather told them about the Aztec gods.

The drama is set in & around New York's 42nd Street, aka The Deuce, seen in the early 1970s, before gentrification had swept the streets clean of the rabble. Raised on the mean streets of Brooklyn, bar manager Vinnie Martino has managed to avoid being swept up into the Mob -- but in his line of work, he's privy to the sordid underbelly of the city, with all its attendant whores, pimps & wise guys -- all out looking for a score. & when Vinnie elects to leave his philandering wife behind & move to Manhattan, where he manages a bar in the middle of The Deuce, he embarks on a new chapter in his life. Although the neighborhood is different, his day-to-day struggle for survival is the same.

A sequel to Stephen King's The Shining, that picks up the life of the Redrum kid Danny Torrance when he is in his 40s and struggling with the same demons of anger and alcoholism that plagued his father. The story begins as Torrance carries the trauma of the Overlook Hotel into adulthood. He's become a reflection of his murderous father, with lingering rage and a drinking problem that dulls his pain as well as his "shining" powers. Those powers return when he embraces sobriety and uses his gift to help the dying at a hospice. He establishes a psychic connection with a young girl who shares his extreme abilities, and who is being targeted by a scary group with the similar abilities. They've found that their powers grow if they inhale the "steam" that comes off others with the power to shine, when they are suffering painful deaths.

One of 8 boys in a Catholic family, adult Timmy Doyle, the narrator of the piece, looks back on his life in California in the early 1970s -- a time of social upheaval in America, and domestic upheaval in the sprawling Doyle clan, where great changes are also underway. Parents Mike and Peggy are trying to wrap their brains around student protests and the Vietnam conflict. Eldest son Lawrence has just announced he doesn't want to become a priest -- a real shocker for his proudly Catholic dad. And Timmy, the neglected middle child, wants to become a musical comedy star and finally be the focus of attention. And when Peggy meets her son Eddie's feminist girlfriend, she gets a taste of independence -- starting with learning how to drive.

Eight years after her devastating defeat, the murderer strikes again, forcing Maya to return to Los Angeles to confront him one more time. Will she play by the rules, or will she do whatever it takes to get him behind bars? Part legal thriller, part confessional, part revenge fantasy. Always riveting.

"FLASHER" Feature Film

BLAH BLAH BLAH PRODUCTIONS / WENDIGO PRODUCTIONS

STATUS: February 9 LOCATION: New York - Paris
PRODUCER: John Backstrom WRITER/DIRECTOR: Robert M. Cluesman PM: Regina Katz
An alienated thirty-something Stock Broker becomes disillusioned with the dog-eatdog nature of Wall Street life, the plasticity of New York high society, and his soon to be father-in-law's idea of his future. After he is seen naked by a shocked Real Estate Agent on a newly constructed high-rise across the street from his home, he has a revelation. He drops out & moves to Paris to lead a solitary life, contemplating the meaning of his existence. But whenever he feels overcome by the angst of his inner demons, he puts on his overcoat, goes to the Metro platform, waits for the train doors to shut... & opens his coat. The Flasher discovers his childhood friend, now a documentary filmmaker, has arrived in Paris on a work assignment for Fashion Week. They meet in a cafe & he tells him his story. The Filmmaker decides that this would be a good subject for a documentary and asks the Flasher's permission to collaborate. He would film each night of the Flasher's adventures & precede them with interviews delving into the Flasher's motivations & observations. One evening, while filming the Flasher, the Filmmaker is detained by an American woman. More intrigued than shocked, she demands to know his story & he submits to telling it in exchange for hers. Very quickly, she becomes fixated on "collecting" the Flasher; who wants nothing to do with her. In a play to get closer to the Flasher, the Woman begins forging a selfish friendship with the Filmmaker. As the Filmmaker spends more time with the Flasher and the Woman, he begins to ponder his own career choices and wonders the meaning of a fulfilling life.

Through the years and the struggles, when life seemed more about hurt and loss than hope and mercy, God was positioning the Smiths for something extraordinary - the death and resurrection of their son. When Joyce Smith's 14-year-old son John fell through an icy Missouri lake one winter morning, she and her family had seemingly lost everything. At the hospital, John lay lifeless for more than 60 minutes. They asked themselves, How could God do this to us? But Joyce was not ready to give up on her son. She mustered all her faith and strength and cried out to God in a loud voice to save her son. Immediately, her son's heart miraculously started beating again. In the coming days, her son would defy every expert, every case history, and every scientific prediction. Sixteen days after falling through the ice and being clinically dead for an hour, John Smith walked out of the hospital under his own power, completely healed. (March 26 - May 8)

Becky DeMuth, 19 and pregnant, is traveling across country with her older brother Cal. They stop on a lonely stretch of highway, near an abandoned church. From a vast field of tall grass across the road they hear a young boy's cries for help. Becky and Cal wade into the grass to investigate and within minutes are disoriented and quickly lose one another, while the boy's cries grow more desperate. Panic, exhaustion and claustrophobia set in as Becky and Cal soon discover that once you enter the grass, it will not let you leave. Distance, sound and time become distorted and just when they think they are close to the road, they find themselves back in the middle of their nightmare. Cal finally reaches the boy, Tobin, who explains that his father, also in the grass, has succumbed to the evil energy that surrounds them. Possessed, he will kill to keep them there. Their only hope of escape rests in the hands of Becky's boyfriend Travis who has come looking for them, desperate to find his pregnant girlfriend. What follows is a thrilling tale of suspense and terror as the group, fearing for their lives, frantically try to find a way out. (June - August)

In Kidding, Carrey plays Jeff, aka Mr. Pickles, an icon of children's television, a beacon of kindness and wisdom to America's impressionable young minds and the parents who grew up with him - who also anchors a multimillion dollar branding empire. But when this beloved personality's family - wife, two sons, sister and father - begins to implode, Jeff finds no fairy tale or fable or puppet will guide him through this crisis, which advances faster than his means to cope. The result: a kind man in a cruel world faces a slow leak of sanity as hilarious as it is heartbreaking. Langella will play Seb, the man who built Jeff's show from a school project to a nationally syndicated cultural touchstone with a multimillion-dollar merchandising empire. He must balance a growing concern for Jeff with the need to keep his onscreen persona from radically changing.

Jimmie Fails, a young black San Franciscan, has a dream. He thinks night and day of how to reclaim the beautiful Victorian home his grandfather built in the heart of the city — the home he grew up in as a boy. But somewhere along the line, drugs trumped the mortgage and his parents lost Jimmie's dream house. Now homeless and restless, Jimmie crashes with his only friend, Prentice, on the edge of the bay in the city's last, crumbling outpost of black life. The boys' world — which seems light years from the San Francisco of glittering new wealth that looms in the distance — is one of loneliness but also strange adventure. Every week, Jimmie and Prentice make a pilgrimage to Jimmie's old house in the Fillmore district. All traces of the old neighborhood — once nicknamed "Harlem of the West" — have been replaced by restaurants fabricated from reclaimed wood, Labradoodle dog walkers and yoga pants-clad joggers. But when Jimmie and Prentice discover one day that the house's current owners have moved out, Jimmie hatches a plan to take it back — and rebuild the connections he longs for. It's a dream that pushes him, and his friendship with Prentice, to the edge.

Messiah explores the lines among religion, faith and politics. It chronicles the modern world's reaction to a man who first appears in the Middle East creating a groundswell of followers around him claiming he is the Messiah. Is he sent from God or is he a dangerous fraud bent on dismantling the world's geopolitical order? The story unfolds from multiple points of view, including a young CIA agent, an Israeli Shin Bet officer, a Latino preacher and his Texan daughter, a Palestinian refugee and the media, among others. Sisley will play Avrim Dahan, an embittered Shin Bet operative who is violent, aggressive, a non-believer who is fighting for the protection of his country and nothing else. He has done some shameful things in the fight against terrorism. Dehbi, will play Al Massih, described as an enigma, his origins a mystery. People are unsure if he is a divine messenger or a political rabble-rouser. When he disappears from an Israeli interrogation cell with no explanation his legend begins to grow. Ortiz plays Felix, smart, humble and unassuming on the outside. Though blessed with a strong faith and a loving family, Felix struggles with his lot in life leading a tiny, uninspired congregation in a border town in Texas where he assumes he will live out the rest of his days. Felix's life is about to change as he gets swept up into Al-Massih's world. With growing power comes corruption and Felix must choose between remaining true to himself or going down a darker path. A Million Little Things, whose title stems from the popular adage, "Friendship isn't a big thing – it's a million little things," is described as being in the tone of The Big Chill. It is about a group of friends who, for different reasons and in different ways, are all stuck in their lives, but when one of them dies unexpectedly, it's just the wake up call the others need to finally start living. The hourlong drama with comedy elements — about a group of eight friends, four men and four women, in which the one whose life looked most put together commits suicide.

An Iraqi SWAT Team who both ally and enemy alike believe dead or lost, happen across three Iraqi Police Officers fighting for their lives against a brace of better-armed Insurgents in a shattered lobby. One of these three Police Officers is already dying from bullets in his stomach. Moments before these Policemen are overrun and murdered, the SWAT Team saves them by obliterating the Insurgents - but not in time to save all three Officers. Once the two surviving Policemen one very young (Bashar) and the other very old (Ahmed), get over the shock of their loss, the SWAT Teams continued existence, and the brutal manner in which the SWAT Team goes about its work, Bashar finds out that he meets the battlefield criteria to become a part of this SWAT Team. Ahmed does not - and the criteria has nothing to do with age. Bashar joins. Ahmed cant. Before he understands what it is he has committed himself to, Bashar is thrown into the ceaseless, remorseless fight waged by this SWAT Team on the Insurgency that has taken over their City, thus dictated the course of their lives and the manner of their deaths. Bashar doesn't understand the Teams methods, their secrecy from friend and foe alike, or their mission a mission that keeps propelling the SWAT Team forward, even in the face of brutal odds, deprivation, insubordination, and attrition. It isn't until he meets Ahmed again that Bashar begins to comprehend the SWAT Team for who they are, and what they're fighting for. He makes an irrevocable decision in this moment, a decision that can only be judged like the SWAT Team itself in the last moments of the film, when the audience understands exactly what it is the SWAT Team has been fighting for all this time. When released, he calls on the family of the victim; they send him away, but not before he has seen a young woman disabled severely by cerebral palsy. Both are abused by their families, and both are used by them as well. Although their relationship begins with Jong-du's criminal behavior, a friendship develops. They talk of favorite things; he washes her hair; they go out; in late night phone calls, he helps her past her fears of the dark. Is there a place in the world for these two inarticulate people? It centers on Nova Bordelon (Wesley), a formidable journalist and activist based in New Orleans. Her life, and that of her brother and their extended family, undergoes significant change when her sister, Charley, returns to Louisiana from Los Angeles to help run the family sugarcane farm. Gardner will play Charley Bordelon West, the charismatic and savvy manager and wife of professional basketball superstar Davis West, with whom she has a challenging, conflicted relationship. The proud mother of Micah, Charley is originally from New Orleans, but never seems to get the time to go back home in the midst of her busy, exciting and public life in Los Angeles. Siriboe is Ralph Angel Bordelon, the youngest Bordelon sibling. Formerly incarcerated and somewhat worn out by life, Ralph Angel is trying to make a new start — and find a job — while raising his beloved 6-year-old son Blue with the help of family members, notably his aunt Violet. Dorsey will play Hollywood Desonier, a rugged, resourceful man and staunch supporter of the Bordelon family. The longtime boyfriend of Violet Bordelon (aunt to Charley, Nova and Ralph Angel), Hollywood clearly loves her — and doesn't think anything of their 20-year age difference. (March 5 - August 8)

The live-action, image-driven film tells the story of Nobel Prize winner Marie Curie and her extraordinary scientific discoveries — through the prism of her marriage to husband Pierre — and the seismic and transformative effects their discovery of radium had on the 20th Century. Born in Poland in 1867, Curie (née Skłodowska) moved to France in 1891 and married Pierre in 1895. They worked together to develop the theory of radioactivity, techniques for isolating radioactive isotopes, and discovered two elements, polonium and radium. The pair were at the dawn of a new scientific and technological era which ushered in the nuclear age. (February 12 - April 13)

The story sees Courtney as Cal, a by-the-book police officer who makes ends meet as a Marine Corps reservist along with his rowdy and inseparable group of childhood friends. When Cal's younger, reckless half-brother Oyster (Wolff) accidentally kills a guy in a bar fight and tries to flee, Cal forces him to face the music. After an unfair sentence, Oyster fights for survival in a dangerous Pennsylvania prison system while Cal and his friends are deployed to fight the lethal insurgency in Iraq. Overseas, Cal's world is shaken, and after he barely makes it home alive, he resolves to break Oyster out of prison — no matter the cost.

In the beautiful, barren landscape of the Far North, under the ever-present midnight sun, Frances (Slate) and Yasha are surprised to find refuge in each other. Their lives have been upended--Frances has fled heartbreak and claustrophobic Manhattan for an isolated artist colony; Yasha, a Russian immigrant raised in a bakery in Brighton Beach, arrives from Brooklyn to fulfill his beloved father's last wish: to be buried "at the top of the world." They have come to learn how to be alone. But in Lofoten, an archipelago of six tiny islands in the Norwegian Sea, ninety-five miles north of the Arctic Circle, they form a bond that fortifies them against the turmoil of their distant homes, offering solace amidst great uncertainty. With nimble and sure-footed prose enriched with humor and warmth, Dinerstein reveals that no matter how far we travel to claim our own territory, it is ultimately love that gives us our place in the world.

On a routine shark-tagging expedition off the coast of Los Angeles, university researcher James Rider and his team discover a sharp increase in shark activity. He reports his findings to his superiors, but no one can understand the sudden uptick. Two days later, hundreds of miles off the coast, an underwater volcano erupts, taking out a US military submarine in the process. The gigantic eruption causes a tsunami, which rolls across the Pacific as it heads towards Los Angeles. On land, animals begin acting strangely. Horses in the Malibu Canyons refuse to take to the trails. Birds seem to flock inland. And soon, the ocean recedes for miles, signaling the oncoming tsunami. The tsunami gathers steam as it approaches Catalina Island, a popular vacation spot for Los Angelinos. James recognizes the signs of impending danger, and calls his wife Carol to warn her to take their son Oliver to the highest place they can find. But Oliver is with some friends at the Santa Monica Pier, in the direct path of the tsunami. The tsunami hits Catalina Island. It lifts a cruise ship to the crest of its powerful wave before hurling it over the island. Thousands of people are killed as the tsunami swallows the island. James gets in touch with Oliver and tells him to run as fast as he can away from the pier. Oliver obeys. James and his team return from the sea and scramble to get as far inland as possible. But news of the tsunami has Los Angeles in a panic. Traffic chokes the streets. Looters take advantage and break into stores on Rodeo Drive. LAX is evacuated as the tsunami continues unstopably along its path. Oliver manages to make it to a skyscraper in West Los Angeles, where he waits for James and Carol. The tsunami hits the coast. Long Beach, Santa Monica, and Malibu take a beating. At LAX, a 747 airliner is thrown over the 405 freeway and spins end over end across Los Angeles before the massive quarter-mile high wave engulfs it and everything around it. James begins his journey to reunite with Carol and Oliver. But the tsunami has brought with it a terrifying surprise: vicious, agitated man-eating sharks, which prowl the submerged streets of Los Angeles.

Uber-successful Pat Hodges is the king of the world -- top at his company and dating the gorgeous daughter of a wealthy politician poised for a presidential run. He has dodged returning to his small Oklahoma home town for years, but when he's tricked into attending a former friend's funeral, he learns that he's been lured back home to complete the fabled 1999 Turkey Bowl game -- a tied high school football game that was interrupted by a blizzard. It's an important competition that would mean everything, not only to the town, but to his old pals and former teammates, Mitchell, Sonny and Ledbetter. However, Hodges just wants to blow off the whole thing and get out of town -- but when he's arrested during a brawl and forced to compete as part of his community service, he begins to bond with his old buddies -- not to mention his former girlfriend, JEN, who just may be the Ms. Right that he passed up for all the wrong reasons. After 15 years of living in a cult, the unbreakable and wide-eyed Kimmy (Kemper) is rescued along with three other women, causing a national sensation that culminates with an appearance on the "Today" show. Before getting back on the bus to Indiana, however, Kimmy decides it's time to reclaim her life. Armed with just a backpack, light-up sneakers, a couple way-past-due library books and a big wad of rescue-fund cash, she's ready to take on New York City. It's easily the best time of Kimmy's life and she makes a spontaneous decision to rent a room from Titus, a wannabe Broadway actor who makes a living as a robot in Times Square. Motivated to start moving forward, Kimmy gets a job as a nanny for an Upper East Side family and it quickly becomes clear to her that money and status aren't synonymous with happiness (or even sanity). Determined to have a romance and take advantage of everything life has to offer, Kimmy is using her optimistic spirit to finally start having all kinds of adventures in a world she never knew existed.

Watchmen is set in an alternate reality that closely mirrors the contemporary world of the 1980s. The primary difference is the presence of superheroes. The point of divergence occurs in the year 1938. Their existence in this version of America is shown to have dramatically affected and altered the outcomes of real-world events such as the Vietnam War and the presidency of Richard Nixon. In keeping with the realism of the series, although the costumed crimefighters of Watchmen are commonly called "superheroes", only one (Doctor Manhattan) possesses any superhuman powers. The war in Vietnam ends with a U.S. victory in 1971 and Nixon is still president as of October 1985. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan occurs approximately six years later than in real life. When the story begins, the existence of Doctor Manhattan has given the U.S. a strategic advantage over the Soviet Union, which has increased tensions between the two nations. Eventually, superheroes grow unpopular among the police and the public, leading to the passage of legislation (the Keene Act) in 1977 to outlaw them. While many of the heroes retired, Doctor Manhattan and a veteran superhero known as The Comedian operate as government-sanctioned agents. Another, Rorschach, continues to operate outside the law. (Series planned to shoot Summer thru November in either Canada or United States.)

A journalist looking for a story about television’s role in the Columbine tragedy interviews TV’s Mr Rogers and, as a friendship develops between the two, he finds himself confronting his own issues at home. It began as another newspaper assignment, a celebrity profile of the children’s television icon. But in Fred Rogers, Texas journalist Tim Madigan found more than a fascinating subject. From their first meeting in 1995, at Rogers’ invitation, the two became unlikely friends, a deep and abiding relationship that lasted until Rogers’ death in 2003. In that time, Madigan found Rogers to be much more than the calm and compassionate personality of television. He was a person of unique human greatness who embodied love, compassion and wisdom his every waking moment. He was the transcendent being who guided Madigan through periods of life-threatening depression and the tragic death of a sibling and helped him heal his difficult relationship with his father.
